

ANOTHER WEDDING AT WHITE HOUSE?

President's Youngest Daughter Reported Engaged to Secretary of Treasury McAdoo.

SECOND RICHMOND IN FIELD

Young Princeton Graduate Also Said to Be in Miss Eleanor Wilson's Favor.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Washington, March 6.—The several times reported engagement of Miss Eleanor Wilson, youngest daughter of the President and Mrs. Wilson to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo received additional confirmation to-day via Washington, Mass., where her sister, the thirteenth White House bride, Mrs. Frances Bowes Sayre, now resides.

The source of this information cannot be divulged, but from intimate associates of the Sayres it has been learned that Miss Wilson's family and relatives are anxiously expecting the announcement of her engagement to the Secretary of the Treasury.

As usual in matrimonial rumors, the source of the information is not concerned with the daughters of the White House, it is impossible to obtain a confirmation or denial of the rumor. Washington society generally, smilingly told of the pleasant gossip, smilingly told of the pleasant gossip, smilingly told of the pleasant gossip.

The open devotion of the Secretary of the Treasury to Miss Eleanor Wilson has been one of the romantic touches of a rather dull winter season. Secretary McAdoo has made no secret of his feelings towards this interesting young girl, and they have appeared to have had many interests in common and have been frequently seen together.

The by in the Secretary's interest, however, seems to be that there is another Richmond in the field in the person of one Princeton post-graduate named King, whose first name society's most assiduous pendents has been unable to discover.

One variation of the report current to-night is that Miss Wilson is hesitating between her two suitors. It is a little difficult for a President's daughter to make an unbiased choice, especially when even a tentative understanding, if it becomes public, may lead to any amount of newspaper comment and whisperings in society.

Imagination Is Fanned.
The possibility of the two suitors has fired the imagination of social folk. The fact remains that the kind that thrills the romantic element of the 400 was the dual courtship of Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of the late Senator and Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, by the royal Italian, Duc D'Abuzzi, and William P. Hitt, son of an Illinois Congressman.

The world here knows the story how, after seven years' loyal service, "Billy" Hitt won his suit, and how the keen interest in the Eleanor Wilson-King-McAdoo triangular romance.

It is understood that Miss Wilson met Mr. King in Princeton, and that a strong friendship, if nothing more, has existed between them for several years. Some time ago Mr. King took a post-graduate course in Europe, and letters with foreign postmarks were frequently seen in Miss Wilson's White House mail all fall. Mr. King was one of the favored guests at the President's wedding.

When the President and his family went to Pass Christian in January, Mr. King turned up at the White House in the little Mississippi town. It was vaguely announced that he was "a sort of cousin" and Mr. King enjoyed the pleasure of that kept the young people of the winter White House wedding.

Miss Eleanor Wilson was in a court at one of the White House balls in New Orleans, and Mr. King stood behind her chair throughout the highly exciting event.

The younger set is much excited at the prospect of another White House wedding, and more so over the thrilling mystery of whether the happy man to lead Miss Eleanor Wilson to the altar will be a distinguished member of her father's Cabinet or Mr. King, a Princeton man.

party to the contrary does him credit," he added. "In such case, the President is for once acting as President of the United States, and not as leader of his party."

The Senator said the "tendency toward materialism and extravagance in the administration of public money" was a marked characteristic feature of the administration. He declared that it was evident to everybody that the administration is opposed to granting suffrage to the "back-lashed" the courage to come out openly and oppose it.

Senator Works also sharply criticized the administration's Mexican policy. "We may be forced yet," said he, "to intervene in some form in Mexico. If we do, it should not be for the aggrandizement of our country, but in the interest of the Mexican people, others resident there, the restoration of peace and the establishment of a stable government."

An Unpleasant Task.
To speak of the relations of the United States with Mexico, Senator Works asserted, was an unpleasant task.

"It is a dark page in our history," he continued. "For three long years American citizens have been murdered, their wives and daughters outraged, their homes pillaged and their property destroyed, and this administration has done nothing more than enter occasional mild protests and submissive appeals, and to whom? To Huerta, whose government we had refused to recognize and who, according to our view, had no power nor authority to act. To Villa, not recognized as a brigand and murderer of innocent people. To Carranza, a weakling dominated by Villa, and equally without authority."

Senator Works outlined the events in the history of Mexico leading up to the present difficulties, and the refusal of this government to recognize Huerta after the assassination of Madero.

"I do not know why the murder of a citizen of Great Britain should have created more feeling than the assassination of hundreds of our own people, except that we have assumed to be the protector of the citizens and the subjects of all other nations, and insisted that such nations should leave this duty and responsibility to us."

"The poor widow asked for the body of her dead husband, buried on Mexican soil. What did our government do to secure this right? It humbly petitioned Villa, his murderer, to allow his remains to be removed."

"What should the government have done in the case? Just what it should have done for one of its own citizens—sent our soldiers into Mexico and brought out the body."

At last a prominent British subject was brutally murdered by Villa or by his orders. Public indignation ran high, but the State Department maintained its usual degree of composure.

W. G. CONRAD DIES IN VIRGINIA HOME

He Was Banker, Builder of Railroads and Mining King.

LEAVES $25,000,000 ESTATE

Had Accomplished Vast Work of Development in Western States.

WILLIAM G. CONRAD.

Winchester, Va., March 6.—William G. Conrad, multi-millionaire banker, railroad builder, mining king and a Democratic leader, who had been ill of Bright's disease since the early part of the winter, died at 7 o'clock this morning at Montana Hall, his country estate, near White Post, Clarke County, Va. He was in the sixty-seventh year of his age. Although arrangements for his funeral have not been completed, it is known his remains will be interred in Mount Hebron Cemetery at Winchester, where his wife and other members of the family are buried.

Mr. Conrad's health began to fail more than a year ago, and he found it necessary to give up practically all his business interests, to which he had devoted many years of his life. Mr. Conrad leaves two sons, Harfield and Arthur Conrad, Mrs. Alexander Gilbank Twigg, of Leeds Manor, Markham, Va., and Miss Minnie Conrad, of Montana Hall, all of whom have been at the home place for some time. He leaves also two sisters, Mrs. Howard Price, of Los Angeles, Cal., and Mrs. Adams, of Great Falls, Mont., and two brothers, Abby Conrad, of Kalispell, Mont., and Howard Conrad, of Alaska. Mr. Conrad's wife, who was formerly Miss Frances Bowen, of Clarke County, Va., died in February, 1912.

Born in Clarke County.
Mr. Conrad was born and reared in Clarke County, and, although a mere boy when the Civil War broke out, he left home and enlisted in the Confederate army, serving as a private and participating in some of the most desperate battles of the entire conflict.

When the war ended he was a poor youth, he left his native State, going to St. Louis, Mo., where he obtained employment with the firm of J. G. Baker & Co. Subsequently he was admitted as a partner in the company.

In the course of a few years he bought the entire business and then established trading posts in that section and also in Canada. One of his posts was at Calgary, Canada, where one of the sons of Charles Dickens commanded the mounted police of the Dominion. He and Colonel Dickens became fast friends.

Later Mr. Conrad moved to Great Falls, where he established a national bank, and in time became the president of five national banks. He moved to Helena, Mont., and was among the first to open copper and silver mines.

He built many miles of railroad in the State, and was one of the leading men in the work of instituting various systems of irrigation.

Estate Valued at $25,000,000.
He owned large and magnificent homes in Helena and Great Falls. He was the only man who owned land in every county of Montana, and his fortune is conservatively estimated at about $25,000,000. Mr. Conrad took an active interest in Democratic politics, and on several occasions yielded to the requests of friends and became a candidate for the United States Senate.

Several years ago he ran against Senator William A. Clark and received one vote of being elected without spending one cent for campaign purposes. Mr. Conrad was also urged to become a candidate for Vice-President on the ticket with William J. Bryan in 1908, but declined.

Some years ago he bought the farm near White Post from the estate of his wife's father, Mr. Bowen, who was
